

ANTHROPOLOGY MINOR

The minor in anthropology is deliberately broad and flexible, so that students can use it to supplement their main major. It complements many different majors, across the spectrum of humanities, social sciences, pre-law, pre-health, pre-business, and most other disciplines.

There are no restrictions on course double-dipping for major and minor programs in Anthropology.

Suggested Sequence of Courses

The Anthropology Minor is deliberately broad and flexible, requiring any five Anthropology (ANTH) classes, only two of which can be at the 100-level. Students are generally encouraged to take the two (2) 100-level classes first, and are advised that ANTH 101 Human Origins and ANTH 100 Globalization and Local Cultures or ANTH 102 Culture, Society, and Diversity are often pre-requisites for other upper-level classes. But there is not set or recommended sequence.

Learning Outcomes

- Students will be able to remember the four sub-fields of anthropology (archaeology, biological, cultural, and linguistic) including their respective core concepts
- Students will apply anthropological theories and methodologies to better understand multiple forms of social difference, including race, ethnicity, class, gender and sexuality
